

Peter W.B. Phillips
University of Saskatchewan

Dr. Phillips is Distinguished Professor of Policy and Founding Director of the Johnson-Shoyama Center for the Study of Science and Innovation Policy at the University of Saskatchewan. He earned his Ph.D. at the LSE and work for 13 years as an economist in industry and government. His research explores bioscience innovation policy related to global food security. He has held visiting appointments at the LSE, EUI, OECD, Chatham House and Universities of Edinburgh, Western Australia, and UTS Sydney. He has won major peer-reviewed grants worth >$250M, is author/editor of 17 books, >75 articles and >70 chapters and serves as an expert advisor for firms and governments around the world.